The fire within desire in modern and contemporary Italian literature

The Fire Within desire for love, desire for knowledge, desire to possess, desire to be desired, our life is shaped by what we want and by our efforts to achieve it. Hailed by philosophers and psychoanalysts as the core of human identity, desire informs not only our actions but also our dreams and hopes and their sublimation into art and literature. This collection of essays explores how desire is portrayed in modern and contemporary Italian literature by analysing some of the most interesting literary figures of the last two centuries. The authors of this collection approach desire from various perspectives: psychoanalytical, sociological, political, and semiotic, in order to show that desire, albeit at times not explicitly mentioned, pervades the literary works of modern and contemporary Italy either as a central theme or as the secret motor of the narrative through the fil rouge of desire. The essays of this collection highlight the international dimension of Italian literature, establishing a connection between Italian authors and the major theoretical works of the last two centuries as the notion of desire as represented in literary texts is informed by psychoanalytical and philosophical concepts that operate across the boundaries of nationality and language. Modernists and scholars of comparative literature will find the papers in this book of considerable interest.

God of Desire 2006-06-01 the courtly love tradition had a great influence on the themes of religious poetry just as an absent beloved could be longed for passionately so too could a distant god be the subject of desire but when authors began to perceive god as immanently available did the nature and interpretation of devotional verse change ryan netzley argues that early modern religious lyrics presented both desire and reading as free loving activities rather than as endless struggles or dramatic quests reading desire and the eucharist analyzes the work of prominent early modern writers including john milton richard crashaw john donne and george herbert whose religious poetry presented parallels between sacramental desire and the act of understanding written texts netzley finds that by directing devotees to crave spiritual rather than worldly goods these poets questioned ideas not only of what people should desire but also how they should engage in the act of yearning challenging fundamental assumptions of literary criticism reading desire and the eucharist shows how poetry can encourage love for its own sake rather than in the hopes of salvation

The Group as an Object of Desire 2013-05-13 desire and domestic fiction argues that far from being removed from historical events novels by writers from richardson to woolf were themselves agents of the rise of the middle class drawing on texts that range from 18th century female conduct books and contract theory to modern psychoanalytic case histories and theories of reading armstrong shows that the emergence of a particular form of female subjectivity capable of reigning over the household paved the way for the establishment of institutions which today are accepted centers of political power neither passive subjects nor embattled rebels the middle class women who were authors and subjects of the major tradition of british fiction were among the forgers of a new form of power that worked in and through their writing to replace prevailing notions of identity with a gender determined subjectivity she also examines the works of such novelists as richardson jane austen and the bronts to reveal the ways in which these authors rewrite the domestic practices and sexual relations of the past to create the historical context through which modern institutional power would seem not only natural but also humane and therefore to be desired

Her Neighbor's Wife 2019-11-01 the color of desire tells the story of how in the aftermath of gay liberation race played a crucial role in shaping the trajectory of queer german politics focusing on the federal republic of germany
Christopher Ewing charts both the entrenchment of racisms within white queer scenes and the formation of new antiracist movements that contested overlapping marginalizations far from being discrete political trajectories. Racist and antiracist politics were closely connected as activists worked across groups to develop their visions for queer politics. Ewing describes not only how AIDs workers, gay tourists, white lesbians, queer immigrants, and black feminists were connected in unexpected ways but also how they developed contradictory concerns that comprised the full landscape of queer politics. Out of these connections which often exceeded the bounds of the federal republic arose new forms of queer fascism as well as their multiple antiracist contestations. These both unsettled the appeals to national belonging or homonationalism on which many white queer activists based their claims. Thus the story of the making of homonationalism is also the story of its unmaking. The Color of Desire explains how the importance of racism to queer politics cannot and should not be understood without also attending to antiracism. Activists worked across different groups making it difficult to chart separable political trajectories. At the same time, antiracist activists also used the fractures and openings in groups that were heavily invested in the logics of whiteness to formulate new antiracist organizations and albeit in constrained ways, shifted queer politics more generally.

The Color of Desire 2024-01-15 in masculinity and queer desire in Spanish enlightenment literature, Mehl, Allan Penrose examines three distinct male figures each of which was represented as the other in eighteenth and early nineteenth century Spanish literature. The most common configuration of non-normative men was the petimetre, an effeminate francophile male who figured a failed masculinity, a dubious sexuality, and an invasive French cultural presence. Also inscribed within cultural discourse were the bujarrón or sodomite who participates in sexual relations with men and the Arcadian shepherd who expresses his desire for other males and who takes on agency as the voice of homoerotica. Analyzing journalistic essays, poetry, and drama, Penrose shows that Spanish authors employed queer images of men to engage debates about how males should appear, speak, and behave and whom they should love in order to be considered real Spaniards. Penrose interrogates works by a wide range of writers including Luis Cañuelo Ramón de la Cruz and Félix María de Samaniego, arguing that the tropes created by these authors solidified the gender and sexual binary and defined and described what a queer man was in the Spanish collective imaginary masculinity and queer desire engages with current cultural, historical, and theoretical scholarship to propose the notion that the idea of queerness in gender and sexuality based on identifiable criteria started in Spain long before the medical concept of the homosexual was created around 1870.

Freeing the Genie Within 2015-05-01 This book considers the connection between the world of mental health in the twenty-first century and the traditional concept of desire in Christianity and the arts. It draws parallels between the desire for rest from anxiety among mental health sufferers with the longing for peace and happiness in religion and the arts. The author presents biblical, philosophical, and theological insights alongside artistic ones, arguing that desire for rest remains at the heart of spiritual living as well as mental health recovery. The chapters draw from historical and contemporary voices including Plato, Augustine of Hippo, Julian of Norwich, Gerard Manley Hopkins, Simone Weil, Samuel Beckett, Tennessee Williams, Jean Louis Chrétien, Eric Varden, and others. The study demonstrates why longing continues to fascinate and grip individuals creative endeavor and society at large not least in the development of the understanding of mental health. It is valuable for scholars and advanced students of Christian theology and those interested in spirituality and the arts in particular.
