the procedure committee has at the speaker's request considered the house's present practice in requiring police forces to notify the speaker of the arrest of any member the house requires the speaker on receipt of a notification of arrest to notify the house accordingly by laying the notification on the table and causing it to be published in the votes and proceedings the practice is connected to the house's claim now purely symbolic to the privilege of freedom from arrest which itself derives from the principle that the house must have first claim on the attendance of its members this claim has never been allowed to interfere with the administration of criminal justice the committee considers that the practice of notification should be retained since it is linked to the house's assertion of its right to the attendance and participation of its members and the house must be in a position to be able to ensure the attendance of its members should it be required to remove any doubt as to the basis for the requirement the committee invites the house to pass a resolution restating its claim

the criminal justice system aims to maintain a balance between the individual interest of private citizens to carry on their lives free from state interference and the communal interest in maintaining a safe society; these two goals come into conflict with each other most visibly when agents of the state physically take control of private citizens that is when they exercise their powers to detain or to arrest. The book focuses on street level encounters, detentions, and arrests that occur in the course of investigating crime and laying charges. The authors explore the initial interaction between agents of the state or others authorized to detain and arrest and the private citizens whose liberty is interfered with; it is at that point that the balance between societal safety and individual liberty is most keenly in play. This second edition has been updated to incorporate significant changes which have taken place with regard to statutory powers; the new citizen's arrest power and others to common law powers, powers of detention, safety searches, search incident to arrest, etc, and to charter rights: freedom from arbitrary detention, right to counsel, and so on.
