Walt Goodridge's book, A New York Times Bestseller, is the previously unpublished masterpiece from the author of Native Son and Black Boy. Fred Daniels, a black man, is picked up randomly by the police after a brutal murder in a Chicago neighborhood and taken to the local precinct where he is tortured until he confesses to a crime he didn't commit. After signing a confession he escapes from the precinct and takes up residence in the sewers below the streets of Chicago. This is the simple horrible premise of Richard Wright's scorching novel The Man Who Lived Underground, a masterpiece written in the same period as his landmark books Native Son (1940) and Black Boy (1945).

Wright was unable to publish this incendiary novel about race and violence in America, the work that meant more to Wright than any other. He has never written anything in my life that stemmed more from sheer inspiration. It is published in full in the form that he intended.

1947 in this stimulating investigation gideon freudenthal has linked social history with the history of science by formulating an interesting proposal that the supposed influence of social theory may be seen as actual through its co herence with the process of formation of physical concepts the reinterpretation of the development of science in the seventeenth century now widely influential receives at freudenthal s hand its most persuasive statement most significantly because of his attention to the theoretical form which is charac teristic of classical newtonian mechanics he pursues the sources of the parallels that may be noted between that mechanics and the dominant philosophical systems and social theories of the time and in a fascinating development freudenthal shows how a quite precise method as he descriptively labels it the analytic synthetic method which underlay the newtonian form of theoretical argument was due to certain interpretive premisses concerning particle mechanics if he is right these depend upon a particular stage of conceptual achievement in the theories of both society and nature further that the conceptual was generalized philosophically but strikingly freudenthal shows that this concept formation itself was linked to the specific social relations of the times of newton and hobbes
