For sixth grader Dolby Hart, the buck stops here quite literally for most of his life. Dolby was a nobody. His father left him, and his mother also mysteriously abandoned him, but Dolby rises to discover that he has unmatched worth and ability as a half tail one who can communicate with whitetail deer. They were always his favorite animal, but now they are his friends. Dolby, who introduces him to the windmaster and challenges him to view God differently because of his unique gift, is thrust into the middle of a great mystery where his hometown's growing deer population looks to him for protection against an unknown enemy. He partners with deer, two new friends, local farmers, and law enforcement to face this threat, which he realizes along the way that he too needs saving the department of parks and recreation requested that the commission on peace officer standards and training conduct a survey and submit a report on findings and recommendations concerning the law enforcement responsibilities and needs of the state park system. Five or six field trips were made to the six district headquarters offices and many park units of the park system. Visitations to 35 units were made before the report was finally completed. Interviews were had with district superintendents and park unit staff, inspections were made of park facilities and equipment. The accumulated data and information were analyzed and assessed in relation to the crime problem and to the law enforcement capability in the park system. The September 11 terrorist attacks have heightened concerns about the security of the nation's icons and parks, which millions of people visit every year. The National Park Service (NPS) is responsible for securing nearly 400 park units that include icons and other parks. In 2004 an audit identified a set of key protection practices that include allocating resources, using risk management, leveraging technology, information sharing, coordination, performance measurement, and testing. The report determined whether the NPS's security efforts for national icons and parks reflected key practices.
