capital in educational contexts is timely in its unique and appropriate analyses of the prevailing internal and external dynamics of capital as indicative of the type of currency within institutional structures or the currency among individual stakeholders of education the intersection of capital and currency emerges similarly and differently within the american compulsory based system of k 12 and the choice based system of higher education more specifically contemporary perspectives on capital in educational contexts disentangles the broader challenges and opportunities of the institution of education and the individuals who comprise emerging insights from the analyses provide an informed basis for ascertaining the rules of engagement and means of negotiation for the respective constituencies with that said this volume essentially responds to three important questions 1 what are the tenets of capital and currency in public schools and higher education 2 how do institutions and individuals navigate those tenets and 3 what general and specific implications do capital hold for the educational pipeline and beyond these questions provide a useful framework for engaging critical conversations about the dynamics of capital while offering perspectives about how to improve the quality of currency in k 12 or colleges and universities these questions further serve as a basis for eliciting more questions toward the consideration capital as both a conceptual construct and applicable model contemporary perspectives on studies by exploring the commonalities and the uniqueness of their individual paths and challenges the chapters of this volume newly identify key factors and experiences that shape black women's engagement or disengagement with higher education. The original research presented here using an array of theoretical lenses as well as qualitative and quantitative methods not only deepens our understanding of the experiences of African American women in the academy but also seeks to strengthen the academic pipeline not only for the benefit of those who may have felt disenfranchised in the past but for all students. The contributors eschew the deficit focused approach that implies a lack of social and cultural capital based on prior educational experiences adopted by many studies of non-dominant groups in education and instead focus on the strengths and experiences of their subjects. Among their findings is the identification of the social capital that black women are given and actively acquire in their pre-collegiate years that enable them to gain greater returns on their educational investments than their male peers. The book further describes the assistance and the interference African American women receive from their peers during their transition to college and how peer interactions shape their early college experiences and influence subsequent persistence decisions. Whether studying how black women in the social and natural sciences navigate through this often rocky terrain or uncovering the extent to which African American women doctoral students access postsecondary education through community colleges and their special needs for more mentoring and advising support, this book provides researchers and graduate students with rich information on how to successfully engage and succeed in the doctoral process. It also demonstrates to women faculty and administrators how they can become better navigators, guides, and advocates for the African American women who come after them. American community colleges represent a true success story with their multiple missions. They have provided access and opportunity to millions of students. However, community colleges are held accountable for their services and must be able to show that they are indeed serving their variety of students appropriately. This volume speaks of the multiplicity of data required to tell the community college story. The authors explore and detail how various sources—workforce data, market data, state-level data, federal data, and institutional data such as transcript files—all have something to say about the life of a community college much like

Contradiction Contradicted 2000 the law of non contradiction that no contradiction can be true has been a seemingly unassailable dogma since the work of aristotle in book gamma of the metaphysics it is an assumption challenged from a variety of angles in this collection of original papers twenty three of the world s leading experts investigate the law considering arguments for and against it and discussing methodological issues that arise whenever we question the legitimacy of logical principles the result is a balanced inquiry into a venerable principle of logic one that raises questions at the very centre of logic itself the aim of this volume is to present a comprehensive debate about the law of non contradiction from discussions as to how the law is to be understood to reasons for accepting or re thinking the law and to issues that raise challenges to the law such as the liar paradox and a dialetheic resolution of that paradox one of the editors contributes an introduction which surveys the issues and serves to frame the debate this collection will be of interest to anyone working on philosophical logic and to anyone who has ever wondered about the status of logical laws and about how one might proceed to mount arguments for or against them
