Philosophy of Religion

2014-09-15

in this book abstract intellectual argument meets ordinary human experience on matters such as the existence of god and the relation between religion and morality the nineteenth century was a turbulent period in the history of the philosophical scrutiny of religion. Major scholars such as Hegel, Fichte, Schelling, Newman, Caird, and Royce sought to construct systematic responses to the Enlightenment critiques of religion carried out by Spinoza and Hume. At the same time, new critiques of religion were launched by philosophers such as Schopenhauer and Nietzsche, and by scholars engaged in textual criticism such as Schleiermacher and Dilthey. Over the course of the century, the work of Marx, Freud, Darwin, and Durkheim brought the revolutionary perspectives of political economy, psychoanalysis, evolutionary theory, and anthropology to bear on both religion and its study. These challenges played a major role in the shaping of twentieth-century philosophical thought about religion. Nineteenth-century philosophy of religion will be of interest to scholars and students of philosophy and religion and will serve as an authoritative guide for all who are interested in the debates that took place in this seminal period in the history of philosophical thinking about religion.

Religion Within the Limits of Language Alone

Religion within the limits of language alone provides a critical examination of the Wittgensteinian philosophers of religion who claim that the word 'God' cannot be understood as referring to a metaphysical being who may or may not exist. McCutcheon traces the arguments offered by these philosophers of religion back to Wittgenstein's own criticisms of speculative metaphysics, arguing that in its religious usage, the concept of God does not fall under Wittgenstein's anti-metaphysical gaze. In presenting a detailed account of Wittgenstein's own philosophical method, including his criticisms of metaphysics, McCutcheon shows that it is possible to accept Wittgenstein's criticisms of metaphysics whilst retaining the metaphysical content of religious language. This book offers a fresh understanding of Wittgenstein's philosophical method and a new critique of religious discourse for those studying philosophy and religious studies.

Renewing Philosophy of Religion

This book is animated by a shared conviction that philosophy of religion needs to change. Thirteen new essays suggest why and how the first part of the volume explores possible changes to the focus of the field. The second part focuses on the standpoint from which philosophers of religion should approach their field. In the first part are chapters on how an emphasis on faith distorts attempts to engage non-Western religious ideas, and on how philosophers from different traditions might collaborate on common interests. On why the common presupposition of ultimacy leads to error, on how new religious movements feed a naturalistic philosophy of religion, and on why a focus on belief and a focus on practice are both mistaken. Why philosophy's deep axiological concern should set much of the field's agenda, and on how the field might contribute to religious evolution. The second part includes a qualitative analysis of the standpoint of fifty-one philosophers of religion and also addresses issues about humility needed in continental philosophy of religion about the implausibility of claiming that one's own worldview is uniquely rational about the Moorean approach to religious epistemology about a spinozan middle way between insider and outsider perspectives and about the unorthodox lessons we could learn from scriptures like the book of job if we could get past the confessional turn in recent philosophy of religion the goal of the volume is to identify new paths for philosophers of religion that are distinct from those travelled by theologians and other scholars of religion

An Introduction to the Philosophy of Religion

1982-12-09

This collection of original articles written by leading contemporary European and American philosophers of religion is presented in celebration of the publication of the fiftieth volume of the international journal for philosophy of religion following the editor's introduction John Macquarrie, Adriaan Peperzak, and Hent de Vries take up central themes in continental philosophy of religion. Macquarrie analyzes postmodernism and its influence in philosophy and theology. Peperzak argues for a form of universality different from that of modern philosophy and de Vries analyzes an intrinsic and structural relationship between religion and the media. The next three essays discuss issues in analytic philosophy of religion. Philip Quinn argues that religious diversity reduces the epistemic status of exclusivism and makes it possible for a religious person to be justified while living within a pluralistic environment. William Wainwright plumbs the work of Jonathan Edwards in order to better understand debates concerning freedom, determinism, and the problem of evil. William Hasker asks whether theological incompatibilism is less inimical to traditional theism than some have supposed. Representing the Thomist tradition, Fergus Kerr challenges standard readings of Aquinas on the arguments for the existence of God. David Griffin analyzes the contributions of process philosophy to the problem of evil and the relation between science and religion. Illustrating comparative approaches, Keith Ward argues that the Semitic and Indian traditions have developed a similar concept of God that should be revised in view of post-Enlightenment theories of the individual. The historical Keith Yandell explores themes in the Indian metaphysical tradition and considers what account of persons is most in accord with reincarnation and karma. Feminist philosophy of religion is represented in Pamela Anderson's article in which she argues for a gender-sensitive and more inclusive approach to the craving for infinitude.
