Terminology in Everyday Life contains a selection of fresh and interesting articles by prominent scholars and practitioners in the field of terminology based on papers presented at an international terminology congress on the impact of terminology on everyday life. The volume brings together theory and practice of terminology and deals with such issues as the growing influence of European English on terminology. Terminology on demand, setting up a national terminological infrastructure, the relevance of frames and contextual information for terminology, and standardisation through automated term extraction and editing tools. The book wants to demonstrate that terminology is of everyday importance and is of interest to everyone interested in the theory and practice of terminology from terminologists to computer specialists to lecturers and students.

Specialty Certified Medical Assistant-Urology

The aim of this volume is to provide an overview of different theoretical perspectives on terminology from Wüster to other initiatives that have emerged since the beginning of the 1990s. The volume also covers important topics which have significantly influenced terminology and its evolution. These include variation, multidimensionality, conceptual relations, and equivalence. Among others, the twenty-two chapters of the volume all written by acknowledged experts in the field explore the questions that different approaches seek to answer. They also describe the theoretical and methodological principles that were devised over the years to characterize, analyze, and represent terminological data. The semi-chronological, semi-thematic organization of chapters not only provides readers with a clear vision of the evolution of ideas in terminology but also gives them an understanding as to why some of these ideas were initially challenged in addition to being accessible to readers unfamiliar with the basic theoretical principles in the field. The chapters provide a showcase of current research in the field, the challenges looming on the horizon, and finally future directions in terminological research by bringing together work that is often disseminated in different forums and written in different languages. This volume provides a unique opportunity to look at how different theoretical approaches to terminology offer complementary perspectives on terms, concepts, and specialized knowledge and help to further a better understanding of the complex phenomena that terminologists must successfully deal with in their work.

Instructor’s Guide for Medical Terminology 1996

Previous work on terminology planning can be more or less divided into general guidelines, local planning, and translation-based activities. This book, however, by avoiding this line of research and any kind of prescription, represents a movement towards generalisation as a prerequisite of theorisation. Its research is predicated on the hypothesis that all terminological activities are founded upon some fundamental principles which at the same time are manifested through context-bound variations or parameters. A particular advantage of the book is its employing of both field research and a review of research literature. The former allows it to carry out a comparative study by using a maximum variation sampling technique for gathering data from four language agencies of different ecolinguistic situations: namely, termcat Catalan, TNC Swedish, DGLLF French, and the Academy of Persian Language and Literature in Iran. In order to this, it uses a questionnaire concentrating on the macro and micro structures of the target organisations as a route map. The literature review allows the book to benefit from research documents from more than thirty sociolinguistic communities. The book’s unique feature includes the introduction of new concepts such as linguistics of science, systemic terminology, systemic planning, terminology argumentation, and sociocognitive terminometrics. Among others, a further distinguishing feature is the fact that it discusses terminology not in a vacuum but as a component of the language of science system.
