usually a matter of accepting rejecting or modifying a single solution because time constraints force decisions before problems are well structured errors are frequently made problem components are at best only partially addressed and the chosen solution may not solve the problem at all and even if it does is likely to generate unanticipated side effects that worsen other problem components in its definitive treatment of a critical but hitherto entirely unresearched dimension of the administration of the u s navy the book provides full details over time concerning the elaboration of officer grades and titles creation of promotion by selection sea duty requirements graded retirement staff line conflicts the establishment of the reserve and such unusual subjects as tombstone promotions in the process it transcends the specifics of the personnel system to give a broad picture of the navy s history over the first century and a half of its development in april 1969 linda moore lanning watched her husband lt michael lee lanning board a greyhound bus that would take him to a military flight scheduled to deposit him in vietnam as he boarded the bus lee told her it s only for a year moore lanning struggled to believe her husband s words waiting one wife s year of the vietnam war is the deeply personal account of moore lanning s year as a waiting wife the first ever book from the perspective of a wife on the home front during the vietnam war moore lanning s telling is both unflinching in its honesty and universal in its evocation of the price exacted from those who were left behind during her waiting year moore lanning traveled far in both distance and perspective from the small west texas town of roby where she had grown up and met her husband through her eyes we experience the agony of waiting for the next letter from lee the exhilaration of learning of her pregnancy the frustration of dealing with friends and family members who didn t understand her struggles and the solace of companionship with susan hargrove another waiting wife because of her insistence that lee give her an honest account of his experiences moore lanning also affords readers a gut wrenching view of vietnam as narrated by an infantry commander in the field unfolding with the gripping narrative of a novel waiting will captivate general readers while those interested in military history and home front perspectives especially from the vietnam war will deeply appreciate this impressive addition to the literature l a times book prize finalist new york times book review paperback row new york times books to watch for in july time best new books july 2020 galvanized by her work in our nation s jails psychiatrist christine montross illuminates the human cost of mass incarceration and mental illness dr christine montross has spent her career treating the most severely ill psychiatric patients several years ago she set out to investigate why so many of her patients got caught up in the legal system when discharged from her care and what happened to them therein waiting for an echo is a riveting rarely seen glimpse into american incarceration it is also a damming account of policies that have criminalized mental illness shifting large numbers of people who belong in therapeutic settings into punitive ones the stark world of american prisons is shocking for all who enter it but dr montross s expertise the mind in crisis allowed her to reckon with the human stories behind the bars a father attempting to weigh the impossible calculus of a plea bargain a bright young woman whose life is derailed by addiction boys in a juvenile detention facility who desperate for human connection invent a way to communicate with one another from cell to cell overextended doctors and correctional officers who strive to provide care and security in environments riddled with danger in these encounters montross finds that while our system of correction routinely makes people with mental illness worse just as

provides an implausible standard made possible by the lack of economic competition from the European and Asian countries winners or losers touched by the war. John Henry Schlegel attempts to answer the question of what to do while waiting for rain first examines the economic history of the United States as well as that of Buffalo, New York, an appropriate stand-in for any city that may have seen its economy start to fall apart in the 1960s, 70s, and 80s. It makes clear that neither Buffalo nor the United States as a whole had an economy in the sense of a persistent market structure that is the fusion of an understanding of economic life with the patterns of behavior within the economic, political, and social institutions that enact that understanding. Since both economies collapsed next, this book builds a plausible theory of how economic growth might take place by examining the work of the famous urbanist Jane Jacobs, especially her book Cities and the Wealth of Nations. Her work, like that of many others, emphasizes the importance of innovation for economic growth but is singular in its insistence that such innovation has to come from local resources. It can neither be bought nor given even by well-intentioned political actors as a result. Americans, generally as well as locally, are like farmers in the midst of a drought left to review their resources and wait. Finally, it returns to both the local Buffalo and the national economies to consider what these political units might plausibly do while waiting for an economy to emerge. This is a quite remarkable book, a pleasure to read not only is it clear and informative but also by turns witty, melancholic, and insightful. The book is astonishingly erudite but wears this learning so lightly and so charmingly that it is both easy and gripping to read. Robert Eaglestone, Royal Holloway University of London. Penelope Waits by Her Loom for Odysseus, Vladimir, and Estragon wait for Godot. All of us have to wait for buses, phone calls, and the kettle to boil but do we know what the checking of one’s watch and pacing back and forth is really all about? What is the relationship between waiting and time? Is there an ethics of waiting or even an art of waiting? Does the internet, online shopping, and text messaging mean that waiting has come to an end? Waiting explores such and similar questions in compelling fashion, drawing on some fascinating examples from the philosopher Henri Bergson’s musings on a lump of sugar to Kate Croy waiting in wings of the dove to the writings of Rilke, Bishop, and Carver. Waiting examines this ever-present yet overlooked phenomenon from diverse angles in fascinating style. On waiting is the first book to present a philosophy of waiting, literature in 1853. Eyre Crowe, a young British artist, visited a slave auction in Richmond, Virginia, harrowed by what he witnessed, he captured the scene in sketches that he would later develop into a series of illustrations and paintings including the culminating painting, Slaves Waiting for Sale. Richmond, Virginia. This innovative book uses Crowe’s paintings to explore the texture of the slave trade in Richmond, Charleston, and New Orleans, the evolving iconography of abolitionist art, and the role of visual culture in the transatlantic world of abolitionism. Maurice D. McInnis illuminates not only how his abolitionist art was inspired and made but also how it influenced the international public’s grasp of slavery in America. With almost 140 illustrations, Slaves Waiting for Sale brings a fresh perspective to the American slave trade and abolitionism as we enter the sesquicentennial of the Civil War. Whereas much theology of religions regards the other as a problem to be solved, this book begins with a church called to witness to its faith in a multicultural world by practising a generous yet risky hospitality.
Theology of dialogue takes its rise from the Christian experience of being in dialogue, taking its rise from the biblical narrative of encounter, call and response. Such a theology cannot be fully understood without reference to the matrix of faith that Christians share in complex ways with the Jewish people. The contemporary experience of the Shoah, the dominating religious event of the 20th century, has complexified that relationship and left an indelible mark on the religious sensibility of both Jews and Christians. Engaging with a range of thinkers from Heschel, Levinas and Edith Stein, who were all deeply affected by the Shoah, to Metz, Panikkar and Rowan Williams, who are always pressing the limits of what can and cannot be said with integrity about the self-revealing Word of God. This book shows how Judaism is a necessary if not sufficient source of Christian self-understanding. What is commended by this foundational engagement is a hope filled waiting on grace made possible by virtues of empathy and patience. A theology of dialogue focuses not on metaphysical abstractions but on biblical forms of thought about God's presence to human beings. Christians share with Jews and under the continuing guidance of the spirit of Christ learn to adapt to a whole range of contested cultural and political contexts. A remarkable historical document, this diary describes a period before the telephone and indoor plumbing were commonplace in rural homes. It details the tremendous changes affecting farming families and small towns during the Great Depression.

A diehard fan who drove himself and his family nearly crazy to get to Cubs games that were miles away from their home, Sullivan recounts the history of Cubs baseball, including events from the 1908 season as well as reminiscences from other fans and stories of his own experience following a team that has gone more than a century without attaining that final win that would make them world champions. Do you wonder where your loved one is? What is he or she doing? What is heaven like? How do you find comfort in the pain? Waiting Territories in the Americas 2016-09-23 mobility and displacement are major characteristics of contemporary societies these population shifts are far from fluid homogeneous or linear but are instead interspersed with a range of longer or shorter periods of waiting whether these intervals are technically administratively or politically motivated they are often understood in spatial terms waiting territories take in order to better understand their various juridical statuses their relationships with their spatial environment and specific forms of temporality and the various economic and social relationships which they foster the contributions primarily focus on the americas because this continent is the product of the voluntary or forced displacement of various appropriated the book is divided into five parts part i the genealogy and stakes of waiting

The Meaning is in the Waiting 2013-01-07 this is the first in a series of books commissioned in consultation with John Sentamu it can be described as the archbishop of York s advent book its theme is overtly an advent one yet subsequent books will range over other biblical and seasonal topics paula Gooder provides a profoundly biblical guide to the season of advent and we explore its central theme of waiting something we are not good at in our modern culture in the company of the biblical characters who feature prominently in the lectionary readings for the season abraham and sarah who waited for a child isaiah and the prophets who waited for judgement and redemption john the Baptist whose role was to wait in the wilderness until the prophecies he foretold were realised mary whose waiting began in pregnancy and continued as she stood at the foot of the cross arranged for daily reading this offers an exquisite meditation on the spirituality of waiting the active doing of nothing as a way of enhancing our lives and bringing us closer to God.

Waiting for the End 2007 waiting for the end examines two dozen contemporary novels within the context of a half century of theorizing about the function of ending in narrative that theorizing about ending generated a powerful dynamic a quarter century ago with the advent of feminist criticism of masculinist readings of the role played by ending in fiction feminists such as Theresa de Lauretis in 1984 and more famously Susan Winnett in her 1991 pmla essay coming unstrung were leading voices in a swelling chorus of theorist pointing out the masculinist bias of ending in narrative with the entry of feminist readings of ending it became inevitable that criticism of fiction would become gendered through the recognition of difference transcending a simple binary of female male to establish a spectrum of masculine to feminine endings regardless of the sex of the writer accordingly waiting for the end examines pairs of novels one pair by Margaret Atwood and one by Ian McEwan to demonstrate how a writer can offer endings at either end of the gender spectrum.

Waiting for Dead Men’s Shoes 2001 this monumental study provides an innovative and powerful means for understanding institutions by applying problem solving theory to the creation and elaboration of formal organizational rules and procedures based on a meticulously researched historical analysis of the u s navy s officer personnel system from its beginnings to 1941 the book is informed by developments in cognitive psychology cognitive science operations research and management science it also offers important insights into the development of the american administrative state highlighting broader societal conflicts over equity efficiency and economy considering the navy s personnel system as an institution the book shows that changes in that system resulted from a long term process of institutional design in which formal rules and procedures are established and elaborated institutional design is here understood as a problem solving process comprising day to day efforts of many decision makers to resolve the difficulties that block completion of their tasks the officer personnel system is treated as a problem of organized complexity with many components interacting in systematic intricate ways its structure usually imperfectly understood by the participants consequently much problem solving entails decomposing the larger problem into smaller more manageable components closing open constraints and balancing competing value premises the author finds that decision makers are unlikely to generate many alternatives since searching for existing solutions elsewhere or inventing new ones is an expensive difficult enterprise choice is usually a matter of accepting rejecting or modifying a single solution because time constraints force decisions before problems are well structured errors are frequently made problem components are at best only partially addressed and the chosen solution may not solve the problem at all and even if it does is likely to generate unanticipated side effects that worsen other problem components in its definitive treatment of a critical but hitherto entirely unresearched dimension of the administration of the u s navy the book provides full details over time concerning the elaboration of officer grades and titles creation of promotion by selection sea duty requirements graded retirement staff line conflicts the establishment of the reserve and such unusual subjects as tombstone promotions in the process it transcends the specifics of the personnel system to give a broad picture of the navy s history over the first century and a half of its development in our nation s jails psychiatrist christine montross illuminates the human cost of mass incarceration and mental illness dr christine montross has spent her career treating the most severely ill psychiatric patients several years ago she set out to investigate why so many of her patients got caught up in the legal system when discharged from her care and what happened to them therein waiting for an echo is a riveting rarely seen glimpse into american incarceration it is also a damning account of policies that have criminalized mental illness shifting large numbers of people who belong in therapeutic settings into punitive ones the stark world of american prisons is shocking for all who enter it but dr montross’s expertise the mind in crisis allowed her to reckon with the human stories behind the bars a father attempting to weigh the impossible calculus of a plea bargain a bright young woman whose life is derailed by addiction boys in a juvenile detention facility who desperate for human connection invent a way to communicate with one another from cell to cell overextended doctors and correctional officers who strive to provide care and security in environments riddled with danger in these encounters montross finds that while our system of correction routinely makes people with mental illness worse just as routinely it renders mentally stable people psychiatrically unwell the system is quite literally maddening our methods of incarceration take away not only freedom but also selfhood and soundness of mind in a nation where 95 percent of all inmates are released from prison and return to our communities this is a practice that punishes us all

My Love Must Wait 1950 waiting to be heard is the voice of the persecuted the brave the hopeful the betrayed and the determined it is a testament to the strength of the human spirit and to a generation that did not see itself as victims but as survivors studies of the war and post war years have traditionally focused on political and military history in recent years there has been a greater interest in the social consequences of the war nevertheless discussions relating to the displacement of the polish born usually focus on the holocaust interpreted as a jewish only phenomenon yet in the years 1939 45 poland lost 6 029 000 or 22 of its total population including approximately 3 million of its christian residents many of those who survived the war at its conclusion were scattered all over the world by the end of 1945 249 000 members of the polish armed forces were under british command with 41 400 dependants in the united kingdom italy east and south africa new zealand india palestine mexico and western germany these refugees have long sought a voice for their experiences the website polishdiaspora net was created in 2006 by dr wojciechowska as a forum for their voices the international deluge of interest in the project resulted in waiting to be heard while some participants had talked and written about their experiences before the majority had not discussed their experiences with anyone outside their immediate social circle and the memories are still painful as exemplified by one participant who said god i ask you allow me to forget those days and weeks when i lay on piles of corpses in the hope of finding a tiny bit of warmth allow me to forget the licking of ice from the walls of the cattle wagons allow me to lose my memory of those years

Waiting to be Heard 2009 what might a sensible community choose to do if its economy has fallen apart and becoming a ghost town is not an acceptable option unfortunately answers to this question have long been measured against an implicit standard the postwar economy of the 1950s after showing why that economy provides an implausible standard made possible by the lack of economic competition from the european and asian countries winners or losers touched by the war john henry schlegel attempts to answer the question of what to do while waiting for rain first examines the economic history of the united states as well as that of buffalo new york an appropriate stand in for any city that may have seen its economy start to fall apart in the 1960s 70s and 80s it makes clear that neither buffalo nor the united states as a whole has had an economy in the sense of a persistent market structure that is the fusion of an understanding of economic life with the patterns of behavior within the economic political and social institutions that enact that understanding since both economies collapsed next this book builds a plausible theory of how economic growth might take place by examining the work of the famous urbanist jane jacobs especially her book cities and the wealth of nations her work like that of many others emphasizes the importance of innovation for economic growth but is singular in its insistence that such innovation has to come from local resources it can neither be bought nor given even by well intentioned political actors as a result americans generally as well as locally are like farmers in the midst of a drought left to review their resources and wait finally it returns to both the local buffalo and the national economies to consider what these political units might plausibly do while waiting for an economy to emerge wings of the dove to the writings of rilke bishop and carver on waiting examines this ever present yet overlooked phenomenon from diverse angles in fascinating style on waiting is the first book to present a philosophy of waiting philosophy literature

On Waiting 2008-06-03 whereas much theology of religions regards the other as a problem to be solved this book begins with a church called to witness to its faith in a multicultural world by practising a generous yet risky hospitality a theology of dialogue takes its rise from the christian experience of being in dialogue taking its rise from the biblical narrative of encounter call and response such a theology cannot be fully understood without reference to the matrix of faith that christians share in complex ways with the jewish people the contemporary experience of the shoah the dominating religious event of the 20th century has complexified that relationship and left an indelible mark on the religious sensibility of both jews and christians engaging with a range of thinkers from heschel levinas and edith stein who were all deeply affected by the shoah to metz panikkar and rowan williams who are always pressing the limits of what can and cannot be said with integrity about the self revealing word of god this book shows how judaism is a necessary if not sufficient source of christian self understanding what is commended by this foundational engagement is a hope filled waiting on grace made possible by virtues of empathy and patience a theology of dialogue focuses not on metaphysical abstractions but on biblical forms of thought about god s presence to human beings which christians share with jews and under the continuing guidance of the spirit of christ learn to adapt to a whole range of contested cultural and political contexts
