Forest Trees, for Shelter, Ornament and Profit

At age fifty when many hope to slow down and what's left as the poet Kobayashi Issa once wrote is clear profit, John Griswold was starting over again in a position he had worked decades to achieve. His family moved down the Mississippi Valley, expecting to create a good life with new friends. What they found instead was a society organized tightly by race, church attendance, and family name. Which in its corruption, laissez faire corporatism, gun love, and environmental degradation foretold the heightened problems of the United States in an era of deepening political division. Taking his cue from classical Asian poets such as Basho, Griswold begins to journey to gain perspective and to find his own narrow road: he travels around the rim of the Gulf of Mexico and to writers’ homes in Russia and New Mexico, attends the protests at Standing Rock, walks the Basho Trail in Japan, and reports on the wholesale slaughter of a Texas Rattlesnake Roundup and the cruel weirdness of the Angola Prison Rodeo. Over eight years, Griswold bears witness to payoff homage, and finds he is able to define and speak with gratitude about what is most important to him—his children, wholeheartedness, and the act of trying in the gap between complexity and a little peace and quiet. There is a way to profit anew.

This book is about managing the task of forecasting profit. It builds a case for using multiple methods, providing examples of each method and suggesting practical techniques to use in dealing with the issues and problems of accuracy in profit forecasts. All the elements that infringe on profits—costs, sales, budgeting, investment, and loan default—are examined within this framework in addition to synthesizing the research. Professor Metcalfe has applied his own research work on forecast modeling and judgmental methods. The final result is a practical reference book for making more accurate profit forecasts.

Between 839 and 1403 CE there was a six century lapse in diplomatic relations between present day China and Japan. This hiatus in what is known as the tribute system has led to an assumption that there was little contact between the two countries in this period. Yiwen Li debunks this assumption arguing instead that a vibrant Sino-Japanese trade network flourished in this period as Buddhist monks and merchants fostered connections across Maritime East Asia based on a close examination of sources in multiple languages including poems and letters, transmitted images and objects and archaeological discoveries. Li presents a vivid and dynamic picture of the East Asian maritime world. She shows how this Buddhist trade network operated outside of the framework of the tribute system and through novel interpretations of Buddhist records provides a new understanding of the relationship between Buddhism and commerce.
