continent s literature yet ideas about the best way to achieve this development and even what development itself should look like have been hotly contested african literature as political philosophy looks in particular at achebe s anthills of the savannah and petals of blood by ngugi wa thiong o but situates these within the broader context of developments in african literature over the past half century discussing writers from ayi kwei armah to wole soyinka m s okolo provides a thorough analysis of the authors differing approaches and how these emerge from the literature she shows the roots of achebe s reformism and ngugi s insistence on revolution and how these positions take shape in their work okolo argues that these authors have been profoundly affected by the political situation of africa but have also helped to create a new african political philosophy this book is made up of a collection of texts unavailable in one volume until now including six previously untranslated essays from a major theologian of the twentieth century rahner s numerous writings focused on the revelation of god as mystery in the world and on the human being who has an essential openness towards the transcendent his articles reveal an empathy and a depth of insight into the relationship between theology faith and the arts which are remarkable and may take the reader by surprise more recently rahner s contribution to the growing field of theology and the arts has been recognised by leading theologians on this subject he asserts that theology must integrate the verbal and non verbal arts as they are authentic means of human self expression of religious experience and of god s self communication and therefore they are essential sources of theology rahner argues that theology understood as a person s reflexive self expression about him or herself in the light of divine revelation cannot be regarded as complete until the arts become an intrinsic moment of theology itself children s literature and intergenerational relationships encounters of the playful kind explores ways in which children s literature becomes the object and catalyst of play that brings younger and older generations closer to one another providing examples from diverse cultural and historical contexts this collection argues that children s texts promote intergenerational play through the use of literary devices and graphic formats and that they may prompt joint play practices in the real world the book offers a distinctive contribution to children s literature scholarship by shifting critical attention away from the difference and conflict between children and adults to the exploration of inter age interdependencies as equally crucial aspects of human life presenting a new perspective for all who research and work with children s culture in times of global aging drawing on the author s teaching practice and experience this book is based on the premise that reading and analysing literary texts are rewarding pursuits the target group is grammar school pupils and students at colleges of education and universities pedagogic theories are dealt with only in so far as they are applicable to the teaching situation after establishing the distinction between fiction which demands a willing suspension of disbelief and non fiction which is set in the universe of the pupils experience succeeding chapters set out the benefits for the teaching of literature namely how it encompasses psychology history and aesthetics it fulfils the horatian demand profit and delight after addressing the pedagogic assets and liabilities of various theories of the concept of text what lies at the heart of the book is how teachers tackle their role in guiding and inspiring without pontificating the invitation to the student is to co operate constructively but not uncritically issues of interpretation and the passing on of interpretative paradigms are alerted to which leads naturally on to the pedagogic challenge of explaining the potentialities of different genres and the necessity of a firm grounding in technical terms like composition style theme metaphor etc as didactic tools a concluding chapter suggests criteria that may make value and evaluation rest on strong foundations in acknowledgement of the subjective elements inherent in the literary experience namely to avoid making literary analysis a schematic formula and to ensure that it promotes the expansion of the students humanistic horizon this book is essential reading for all those involved in teaching literature and language william dean howells 1837 1920 was an american realist author and literary critic he wrote his first novel their wedding journey in 1871 but his literary reputation really took off with the realist novel a modern instance published in 1882 which describes the decay of a marriage his 1885 novel the rise of silas lapham is perhaps his best known describing the rise and fall of an american entrepreneur in the paint business his social views were also strongly reflected in the novels annie kilburn 1888 and a hazard of new fortunes 1890 while known primarily as a novelist his short story editha 1905 included in the collection between the dark and the daylight 1907 appears in many anthologies of american literature howells also wrote plays criticism and essays about contemporary literary figures such as ibsen zola verga and especially tolstoy which helped establish their reputations in the united states he also wrote critically in support of many american writers it is perhaps in this role that he had his greatest influence the divide between the sciences and the humanities which often seem to speak entirely different languages has its roots in the way intellectual disciplines developed in the long eighteenth century as various fields of study became defined and to some degree professionalized their ways of communicating evolved into an increasingly specialist vocabulary chemists physicists philosophers and poets argued about whether their discourses should become more and more specialised or whether they should aim to remain intelligible to the layperson in this interdisciplinary study robin valenza shows how isaac newton samuel johnson david hume adam smith samuel taylor coleridge and william wordsworth invented new intellectual languages by offering a much needed account of the rise of the modern disciplines robin valenza shows why the sciences and humanities diverged so strongly and argues that literature has a special role in navigating between the languages of different areas of thought perhaps the reader may not feel in these papers that inner solidarity which the writer is conscious of and it is in this doubt that the writer wishes to offer a word of explanation he owns as he must this book is made up of a collection of texts unavailable in one volume until now, including six previously untranslated essays from a major theologian of the twentieth century, Rahner. His numerous writings focused on the revelation of God as mystery in the world and on the human being who has an essential openness towards the transcendent. His articles reveal an empathy and a depth of insight into the relationship between theology, faith, and the arts, which are remarkable and may take the reader by surprise. More recently, Rahner's contribution to the growing field of theology and the arts has been recognized by leading theologians on this subject. He asserts that theology must integrate the verbal and non-verbal arts as they are authentic means of human self-expression of religious experience and of God's self-communication. Therefore, they are essential sources of theology. Rahner argues that theology understood as a person's reflexive self-expression about him or herself in the light of divine revelation cannot be regarded as complete until the arts become an intrinsic moment of theology itself.

The book explains various methods for solving nonlinear oscillator and structural system problems, including the energy balance method, harmonic balance method, amplitude frequency formulation, variational iteration method, homotopy perturbation method, iteration perturbation method, homotopy analysis method, simple and multiple shooting method, and the nonlinear stabilized March method. This book comprehensively investigates various new analytical and numerical approximation techniques that are used in solving nonlinear oscillator and structural system problems. Students often rely on the finite element method to such an extent that on graduation, they have little or no knowledge of alternative methods of solving problems. To rectify this, the book introduces several new approximation techniques.
