Universal offering non-denominational studies appropriate for school age children to seniors, regardless of prior Bible knowledge, transformational, providing with each study an encounter with a specific facet of God's character and with His Son Jesus Christ. David Janzen argues that the Book of Chronicles is a document with a political message as well as a theological one, and moreover that the book's politics explain its theology. The author of Chronicles was part of a 4th century B.C.E. group within the post-exilic Judean community that hoped to see the Davidides restored to power, and he or she composed this work to promote a restoration of this house to the position of a client monarchy within the Persian Empire. Once this is understood as the political motivation for the work's composition, the reasons behind the chronicler's particular alterations to source material and emphasis of certain issues becomes clear. The doctrine of immediate retribution, the role of all Israel at important junctures in Judah's past, the promotion of levitical status and authority, the virtual joint reign of David and Solomon, and the decision to begin the narrative with Saul's death can all be explained as ways in which the chronicler tries to assure the 4th century assembly that a change in local government to davidic client rule would benefit them. It is not necessary to argue that Chronicles is either pro-davidic or pro-levitical; it is both and...
