A comprehensive and richly illustrated survey of Venetian renaissance architecture, sculpture, and painting created between 1400 and 1600 is addressed to students, travelers, and the general public. The works of art are analyzed in terms of function, style, iconography, patronage, classical sources, gender, art theories, and artist's innovations. Rivalries and social status are also discussed. The text has been divided into two parts: the fifteenth century and the sixteenth century. Each part is preceded by an introduction that recounts the history of Venice to 1500 and to 1600 respectively, including the city's founding ideology, territorial expansion, social classes, governmental structure, economy, and religion. The twenty-six chapters are organized to lead readers systematically through the major artistic developments within the three principal categories of art: governmental, ecclesiastic, and domestic. The conclusion offers an overview of the major types of Venetian art and architectural patronage and their funding sources.

Expands on the first edition with brand new images, procedures, protocols, and the latest terminology and concepts. This book provides an up-to-date introduction to the important and growing field of urban anthropology. This is an increasingly critical area of study as more than half of the world's population now lives in cities and anthropological research is increasingly done in an urban context. Exploring contemporary anthropological approaches to the urban, the authors consider how we define urban anthropology what are the main themes of twenty-first-century urban anthropological research, what are the possible future directions in the field, the chapters cover topics such as urban mobilities, place making, and public space production and consumption. Politics and governance are illustrated by lively case studies drawn from a diverse range of urban settings in the global north and south. Accessible yet theoretically incisive, introducing urban anthropology will be a valuable resource for anthropology students as well as of interest to those working in urban studies and related disciplines such as sociology and geography.
American economy faces two deep problems expanding innovation and raising the rate of quality job creation. Both have roots in a neglected problem: the resistance of legacy economic sectors to innovation. While the U.S. has focused its policies on breakthrough innovations to create new economic frontiers like information technology and biotechnology, most of its economy is locked into legacy sectors defended by technological, economic, political, and social paradigms that block competition from disruptive innovations that could challenge their models. Americans like to build technology-covered wagons and take them out west to open new innovation frontiers. We don’t head our wagons back east to bring innovation to our legacy sectors. By failing to do so, the economy misses a major opportunity for innovation, which is the bedrock of U.S. competitiveness and its standard of living. Technological innovation in legacy sectors uses a new unifying conceptual framework to identify the shared features underlying structural obstacles to innovation in major legacy sectors: energy, air and auto transport, the electric power grid, buildings, manufacturing, agriculture, health care delivery, and higher education. It develops approaches to understand and transform these sectors. It finds both strengths and obstacles to innovation in the national innovation environments, a new concept that combines the innovation system and the broader innovation context for a group of Asian and European economies. Manufacturing is a major legacy sector that presents a particular challenge because it is a critical stage in the innovation process. By increasingly offshoring production, the U.S. is losing important parts of its innovation capacity. Innovate here, produce here, where the U.S. took all the gains of its strong innovation system at every stage, is being replaced by innovate there, produce there, which threatens to lead to produce there, innovate there, to bring innovation to legacy sectors. Authors William Bonvillian and Charles Weiss recommend that policymakers focus on all stages of innovation from research through implementation. They should fill institutional gaps in the innovation system and take measures to address structural obstacles to needed disruptive innovations. In the specific case of advanced manufacturing, the production ecosystem can be recreated to reverse jobless innovation and add manufacturing-led innovation to the U.S.'s still strong research-oriented innovation system. Approaches to American Cultural Studies 2016-05-20 The singer-songwriter in Europe is the first book to explore and compare the multifaceted discourses and practices of this figure within and across linguistic spaces in Europe and in dialogue with spaces beyond continental borders. The concept of the singer-songwriter is significant and much debated for a variety of reasons. Many such musicians possess large and zealous followings, their output often esteemed politically and usually held up as the nearest popular music gets to high art. Such facets often yielding sizeable economic benefits. Yet, this figure per se has been the object of scant critical discussion with individual practitioners celebrated for their isolated achievements instead of responding to this lack of critical knowledge. This volume identifies and interrogates the musical, linguistic, social, and ideological elements that configure the singer-songwriter and its various equivalents in Europe such as the French auteur compositeur interprète and the Italian cantautore. Since the late 1940s, particular attention is paid to the emergence of this figure in the post-war period, how and why its contours have changed over time and space, subsequently cross-cultural influences and the transformative agency of this figure as regards party and identity politics in lyrics and music. Often by means of individual case studies, the book's polycentric approach endeavours to redress the hitherto anglophone bias in scholarship on the singer-songwriter in the English-speaking world, drawing on the knowledge of scholars from across Europe and from a variety of academic disciplines, including modern language studies, musicology, sociology, literary studies, and history.

The Singer-Songwriter in Europe 2016-03-22 Using children's and young adult literature is a great way to enhance a variety of college classes in fields as varied as biology, computer game development, political science, and history. This collection of new essays by educators from a number of disciplines... describes how to use such works as WHERE THE WILD THINGS ARE, THE TALE OF PETER RABBIT, SWAMP THING, PERCY JACKSON, AND HARRY POTTER to introduce complex concepts and spark interest in difficult subjects. The contributors describe innovative teaching strategies using dystopian fiction, graphic narratives, fairy tales, and mythology—often overlooked or dismissed by teachers. Children's literature can support student learning by raising levels of academic rigor, creativity, and critical thinking.

Psycho-oncology 2015 the american economy faces two deep problems expanding innovation and raising the rate of quality job creation both have roots in a neglected problem the resistance of legacy economic sectors to innovation while the u s has focused its policies on breakthrough innovations to create new economic frontiers like information technology and biotechnology most of its economy is locked into legacy sectors defended by technological economic political social paradigms that block competition from disruptive innovations that could challenge their models americans like to build technology covered wagons and take them out west to open new innovation frontiers we don t head our wagons back east to bring innovation to our legacy sectors by failing to do so the economy misses a major opportunity for innovation which is the bedrock of u s competitiveness and its standard of living. technological innovation in legacy sectors uses a new unifying conceptual framework to identify the shared features underlying structural obstacles to innovation in major legacy sectors energy air and auto transport the electric power grid buildings manufacturing agriculture health care delivery and higher education and develops approaches to understand and transform them. it finds both strengths and obstacles to innovation in the national innovation environments a new concept that combines the innovation system and the broader innovation context for a group of asian and european economies. manufacturing is a major legacy sector that presents a particular challenge because it is a critical stage in the innovation process. by increasingly offshoring production the u s is losing important parts of its innovation capacity innovate here produce here where the u s took all the gains of its strong innovation system at every stage is being replaced by innovate here produce there which threatens to lead to produce there innovate there to bring innovation to legacy sectors. authors william bonvillian and charles weiss recommend that policymakers focus on all stages of innovation from research through implementation they should fill institutional gaps in the innovation system and take measures to address structural obstacles to needed disruptive innovations. in the specific case of advanced manufacturing the production ecosystem can be recreated to reverse jobless innovation and add manufacturing led innovation to the u s s still strong research oriented innovation system.
